HOW TO USE THIS REPORT

Give a copy to your insurance adjuster with your claim. Most homeowners and renters policies require you to prepare an inventory of damaged personal property and to attach the bills, receipts and documents that support it — and to send a signed, sworn proof of loss on your insurer's own form, often within 60 days of their request. This report is the inventory, not the proof of loss. Keep a copy somewhere other than your home.

Photographs and receipts attached to this report were recorded on the dates shown, before any loss.

IMPORTANT — WHAT THIS DOCUMENT IS AND IS NOT

This document was prepared by the policyholder using Homefolio, a personal record-keeping app. It is not an insurance form, not a proof of loss, and not a claim. Homefolio is not an insurance company, agency, adjuster, or advisor, and is not affiliated with or endorsed by any insurer or government agency. All descriptions, dates, quantities and values were entered by the policyholder and have not been verified. Values shown are the policyholder's own estimates of purchase price and current replacement cost; they do not reflect depreciation, actual cash value, policy limits, deductibles, or any amount payable under any policy. Your insurer determines what is owed.

† Many homeowners and renters policies limit how much they pay for this category — for example, theft of jewelry is often capped around $1,500 regardless of the total value you own. Limits vary by policy and by insurer. Check the "Special Limits of Liability" section of your policy and your declarations page, and ask your licensed agent whether these items should be scheduled separately.

‡ Under many policies, antiques, fine art, memorabilia and collectors' items are settled at actual cash value rather than replacement cost. Consider a current appraisal, and ask your licensed agent about scheduling these items.
